Oakley Capital invests in global strategic advisory business G3

Oakley Capital, a leading pan-European private equity investor, is pleased to announce that Oakley Capital VI ("the Fund") has acquired a majority stake in G3, a global strategic advisory consultancy. This will be the Fund's first investment since closing at its €4.5 billion hard cap earlier this year.

G3 helps clients manage their risk and enable opportunities by providing reputational and strategic intelligence, dispute advice and cyber consulting. The company's clients include some of the largest private equity and sovereign wealth funds, global corporates and leading law firms. Headquartered in London, G3 also has offices in New York, Singapore, Tokyo and Abu Dhabi. The Company is led by Michael Bevan and Nick Alcock.

G3 has achieved strong, double-digit growth in recent years, driven by increasing client demand for support on critical business decisions and by its expansion into new geographies and high-growth areas such as cyber advisory.

The market for strategic risk advisory services is expected to grow significantly as geopolitical tensions, regulation and business complexities continue to increase.

Nick and Michael will remain invested in G3 and continue to manage the business alongside the wider management team. Oakley will support the continued growth of the business including by accelerating G3's international expansion, with a particular focus on the US.

Oakley Capital Partner Arthur Mornington said: Global businesses face an increasingly complex and volatile geopolitical environment. G3 has earned a strong reputation for guiding clients through these challenges as a trusted strategic adviser. We look forward to partnering with Nick and Michael and helping them further elevate G3 to a leading position in the corporate intelligence market.
